PROFESSIONAL PROFILE

My passion for music led me to learn to play the drums at a very young age. Being blind has never been a limitation for me, but rather a challenge that has fueled my drive for excellence in everything I do. I have developed exceptional resilience, adaptability, and problem-solving skills that have strengthened both my artistic and teaching abilities. I am passionate about helping students grow musically while creating engaging and inclusive learning environments.

As a proud Mexican, I pursued opportunities beyond the borders of my country, seeking education at Berklee College of Music.

Beyond playing the drums, I am passionate about music education, performance, and music production. I enjoy collaborating with musicians, mentoring students, and working with creative teams to help artists and performances reach their full potential.

My long-term goal is to combine music education, performance, and music production to help artists and students reach their highest creative potential.
